President's Message

July 2014

Dear Kiwanians,

Happy birthday, America! This week, we'll be celebrating the 4th of July with the usual fireworks, hot dogs, kids decorating their bikes, and lots of red, white, and blue everywhere. I've just returned from a trip to New England, and many towns there were already festooned with bunting and flags in preparation for the big day. It's a tradition we all share as Americans, and it gives us a chance to express how proud and lucky we are to live here.

Not all American children are being raised with a sense of pride in their country. Some are growing up seeing little opportunity, a lot of strife in their families, and hardship everywhere. We as Kiwanians do what we can to help those kids see a brighter future, and we can be very proud of how much good we do for those kids. There is always more that needs to be done.

Kiwanis International is making great strides in eliminating maternal and neonatal tetanus in developing countries. Just this week, Madagascar was certified as having eliminated it. Our club has not chosen to direct any of the funds we raise locally to that cause, but many of you have given individually to that effort. It is another sign of the greatness of this country that we give so generously to people and organizations in other countries to try to improve their standards of living.

This August 15–17, our Georgia District convention will take place here in Savannah. Our club will be helping with registration. Sign-up sheets for various shifts will be on the tables throughout July (or until all the slots are filled). You'll see more about the convention on page 5.

To those who are away for weeks or months this summer, we wish you a very happy vacation. To those who are here, I look forward to seeing you each upcoming Thursday morning. Have a wonderful 4th of July!

Melissa

Update from Savannah Early Childhood Foundation

- Special to the Kiwanigram from Jan Wright

I had the pleasure to sit down with Savannah Early Childhood Foundation (SECF) president Paul Fisher for a couple of hours recently, to catch up on SECF news as our club gears up for a second round of our Take a Chance for Kids fundraiser for SECF. Here are the highlights of our conversation.

SECF President
Paul Fisher

Jan: SECF's name is about early childhood. Is that where you're focusing your efforts?

Paul: Research shows that the most important stages of cognitive development happen in a person's first 2-3 years of life and that creating a safe, nurturing and language-rich environment is the key determinant variable, not demographics or economics. SECF is focusing on helping parents of children ages 0-5 to give those children the best possible start in life. Working with Parent University and other partners in our community, our goal is to help parents develop parenting skills that will enable their children to be ready for school at school age and enable parents to be active partners with the schools throughout their child's formal education.

Jan: SECF is in its second year of running Early Learning College through Parent University. Can you update us?

Paul: Yes, we've had a super year and now are running 6-session parenting skills training in 2 of the 9 neighborhoods prioritized by Youth Futures Authority. We've expanded from serving East Broad Elementary's neighborhood to also serving Schuman's.

Jan: What are SECF's most critical needs for the year ahead?

Paul: Parent University needs a full-time executive director. We're working to secure $150,000 of funding so the current director can transition from being a part-time volunteer to a full-time paid position. We believe having a full-time executive director could enable our programs to grow exponentially. We're also working to raise finance in anticipation of that growth.

Jan: Where does SECF plan to expand next? How much finance are we talking about?

Paul: Where we expand next will depend on which neighborhood schools are most ready to work with us. In our first 3 years, we've raised $200,000, all of it private, and 75% of it from our local community. Each 6-session series of Early Learning College classes at Parent University class costs $25,000, so we're talking about $225,000/year when we expand to all 9 neighborhoods for this component of our programs.

Jan: Metrics have always been important to you, and you have said that SECF intends to sustain its efforts for at least a generation. Can you tell us more about how you will know if SECF's investment in parents, local childcare facilities, and ultimately young children actually makes a positive difference?

Paul: We're taking it a step at a time. First, we're using pre- and post-testing for parents to measure how much they've learned at Parent University and are working to implement controlled observation of their ability to apply it in practice. Concurrently, we're working with the neighborhood schools to ensure we have baseline scores for students and measure their absolute and relative progress over time. We've recently formed a partnership with Armstrong State University, to develop a database and robust analytical model to support our longitudinal studies.

Jan: Thank you, Paul, for this update. It's so exciting to hear how SECF is building upon the Harlem Children Zone project experience and taking early childhood development to a new level. I know our readers will want to hear more as this work continues and to do their part to support it.

Paul: I'd like to thank Kiwanis of Skidaway for partnering with us, and I'll be happy to come back to update your members in person. While SECF's goal is "all children ready at school age," our vision is "our community taking care of our own."

Note: You can follow SECF's progress on Facebook at www.facebook.com/SavannahECF.

District News: A Special Opportunity

If you haven't attended a Georgia District Convention, this year it's easier than ever to do so. Being held at the Savannah Marriott August 15-17, it couldn't be more convenient! Why not take this opportunity to expand your personal Kiwanis profile by attending all or part of the event.

You'll observe first hand the decision-making processes of our district; learn about and celebrate major club & district accomplishments, attend special classes to enhance your own understanding of key service programs and, most importantly, share your personal Kiwanis stories with others. Having personally attended several of these events, I've found the Saturday night governor's banquet to be extra special. It would be great if we could have a couple of tables of Skidaway Kiwanians (and spouses) attending that session together.

For more information on the overall convention schedule, please see the July issue of The Georgia Kiwanian or log on to the district web site gakiwanis.org. You can also register for the convention there.

- Incoming District Lt. Governor, Erv Hietbrink
